1. A White Russian tank division is stationed in Biesa where the barracks are filled to capacity. Components of the division are also stationed in Oschatz. The division appears to be equipped with new tanks of an extraordinarily large model. The width of the caterpillar tracks of these vehicles is 1.10 meters, hence wider than those of the JS III, the latest Russian tank model. Other features of the vehicles could not be observed.
2. The former munitions depot at Zeithain is located at the southwestern edge of the troop training field. The depot has recently been surrounded by a triple fence. At night, the innermost fence is charged with electricity. Watchtowers, constantly manned by Russian troops, surround the area at 300 meter intervals. All towers are connected with each other by telephone. Stronger guards have been mounted recently at all avenues of approach to the depot and the training field.
